THE JAVITS CENTER WELCOMES THE FIFTH ANNUAL GREEN FESTIVAL, THE LARGEST AND LONGEST-RUNNING SUSTAINABILITY EVENT IN THE UNITED STATES

More than 20,000 Attendees Expected to Attend This Year's Dynamic Event

Exclusive Tours of the Javits Center's Award-Winning Green Roof Offered to Participants

NEW YORK (April 15, 2016) – The Javits Center is excited to welcome the Green Festival to Manhattan's West Side, marking the fifth annual edition of the event, the largest and longest running sustainability event in the United States. More than 20,000 attendees enjoyed last year's event, and event organizers are expecting an even larger turnout for this year's three-day show from Friday, April 15 to Sunday, April 17. As a unique platform connecting customers, retailers, wholesalers and corporations interested in green living, the festival boasts the widest selection of green products and services from food, fashion and health to energy, construction and design. Participants can shop and enjoy vegan, vegetarian, organic foods, hands-on demos, educational activities and inspirational speakers. Ticket sales have steadily increased each year, according to event producers, and with the opening of the new Hudson Yards-34th Street subway station, transportation to the Javits Center has been never been easier.

Following the completion of a five-year renovation, the Javits Center has become a model of sustainability within the exposition industry, earning LEED Silver certification from the U.S. Green Building Council. With the installation of energy-efficient lighting and mechanical equipment, thousands of high-performance, translucent glass panels and a 6.75-acre green roof, the second largest of its kind in the country, the building's energy consumption has been reduced by 26%, saving millions of dollars in energy costs. As a part a social media contest coordinated by Green Festivals, two groups of attendees will receive an exclusive tour of the green roof with Javits Center staff.

"The Javits Center has become a leader in sustainability, and we are proud to host Green Festival which champions the great need for green living," said Alan Steel, President and CEO of the New York Convention Center Operating Corporation, which operates the Javits Center. "As part of our focus on sustainability, we work closely with our events to explore ways to reduce energy consumption, recycle materials and donate goods to local organizations. Hosting Green Festival is a testament to our ability to attracting a diverse portfolio of trade shows, conventions and special events to New York."

"We are especially pleased to be back in New York City and thrilled to welcome our 2016 attendees to the Javits Center, a leader in sustainable venues nationwide," said Dr. Corinna Basler, president of Green Festivals, Inc. "Our Expo features the best ways apply sustainable practices to all aspects of life and work, and we are proud to consider the Javits Center a partner for the Green Festival Expo.”

In January, Governor Andrew M. Cuomo announced a $1 billion expansion project for the Javits Center, which will include five times more meeting room space, the largest ballroom in the Northeast and an on-site truck marshaling facility that will relocate 20,000 trucks off local streets each year. This expansion will enable the Javits Center to host more dynamic events, improve its operational efficiency and generate nearly $400 million in additional annual economic activity. Construction is set to begin later this year.
